I wrote SUPERWOMAN: A Funny and Reflective Look at Single Motherhood to remind other single mothers that they are not alone.

According to the 2017 U.S. Census Bureau and Statistics Canada, there are well over 11 Million single mothers across North America.

Raising children is both demanding and worthwhile. Yet single mothers often feel torn between excelling in the workplace and caring for their children. As a result, they view their job as a source of income, versus an opportunity for advancing in a satisfying career. When organizational leaders recognize the attributes and strengths of single mothers by investing in their development, they benefit from a more skilled, productive, and committed employee. A win/win situation indeed!

This is where Mona Andrei comes in. Armed with her personal and professional experiences, Mona inspires single working mothers to reclaim their forgotten potential and sense of purpose – regardless of past choices, labels, and economic status.

SPEAKING TOPICS

Live your best life with the three Cs: Courage, Confidence, Commitment.

Re-energize your life with a sense of purpose.

Remember who you are and live with passion.

Virtual and In-person. Tailored to suit a variety of organizations and occasions.

A single mother at age 24, Mona struggled with the day-to-day responsibilities of raising her children while endeavoring to pay bills and put food on the table. It wasn't until Mona's supervisor took notice of her work ethics and untapped potential that she realized she had been defining herself by the confining label, 'single mother', which put her under a spell of limiting beliefs.

Through mentorship and workplace development opportunities, Mona managed to build the skill sets and confidence required to reclaim her ambitions. She went on to become a member of an award-winning marketing agency team; all while raising her four children.

Using humor and candor, Mona, now an accomplished writer, is known for her ability to engage and inspire audiences. She encourages them to tap into their courage and build their confidence, in turn becoming greater contributors at work while balancing the demands of their lives.
